Who are we?

We are a Stephen George International company – owned and managed in partnership with one of the UK's major Architectural firms. CGI source was borne out of the need for international Architects to express their ideas cross culture. We were a product of the Architectural industry and still today we are owned and managed by Architects. We also share our work space and our knowledge daily with practising Architects and designers – this enables us to deliver and even develop the brief for the client and fully understand their needs and their goals in depth.

Our Philosophy

We don't simply create great visuals or animations – we believe our work ensures a competitive advantage for our clients through our dedication to provide exceptional quality and value.

We operate from Sofia, Bulgaria and have had a presence here for the past 8 years, as a partner and founder of this company it has always been my aim to empower and bring to market the fantastic talent that this region has to offer and to give that talent the opportunity to flourish.

Our Aim

The hardest part about convincing companies to outsource is communication. We know absolutely that the creative and technical process depends on communication to run efficiently and effectively. Today, with the technology that is freely available, physical inaccessibility is no longer an issue. We could as well be located in Covent Garden dealing with someone in Holborn. However cross cultural and language issues are still potentially problematic. UK Architecture is specific. To understand these area specific issues takes experience of working in or with that environment for a sustained period.

Our staff are all excellent English speakers. The project managers are trained, practising Architects who have substantial experience working cross culture and we are owned and managed in house by British nationals.

We aim to cater for all the outsourcing requirements an Architectural design firm could need and we currently offer a range of services that need no more explanation and will continue to change and evolve in response to our clients' needs and market requirements.
